STEP ABOARD THE ALASKA MARINE HIGHWAY

The Alaska Marine Highway is a state-owned ferry system that operates a fleet of vessels along a scenic 3,500-mile route from Washington State to the Aleutian Islands. It provides economical, year-round transportation to 35 port communities and a unique option for travelers.

Originally designed to provide transportation to roadless areas of Alaska, the Marine Highway offers locals and visitors the ability to travel together through some of the most breathtaking scenery in the world. In fact, the Marine Highway encompasses a route so spectacular it has been designated an All-American Road and one of America's National Scenic Byways.

The Marine Highway is ideal for independent travelers who want to choose their own destinations and how they'll get there. The fleet includes ships in a variety of sizes, some able to carry as many as 500 passengers and 100 vehicles. Riders can walk on board or bring a car, truck, motorcycle or other means of transport, such as kayaks and bicycles. Passengers can book a cabin or, as a less-expensive alternative, pitch a tent and camp out under the stars.

From the deck of the ships riders can enjoy the view of vivid blue glaciers, snow-capped mountains, active volcanoes, majestic fjords and lush green forests. Passengers will also find ample opportunities to view wildlife such as porpoise, bald eagles, sea otters, whales and perhaps even bears along the coastline.

The Alaska Marine Highway provides a unique and unforgettable way to experience Alaska.

- Off the beaten path
- Casual and laid-back
